Dear Folk Dancer:

Well, back to the old grind! Six more sessions to go in this semester. Remember, we resume the series on Tuesday, January 8, and back to Webster School. Starting time, 8:30 p.m. sharp.

Spencer Wiedenheft, veteran member and past-president of the Folk Dance Club, and currently member of the program committee and teaching faculty, will conduct the next six sessions. We feel that the dances in this series become progressively more and more interesting. More variety of patterns, more variety of steps, more wonderful music. You'll get more on background and styling, posture and body positions.

After the fine job George Biersack did on fundamentals, squares, and introductory materials, there should now be a good foundation for Spence to carry on with further development of the class.

We expect to have a good supply and variety of records at the next session, and dance literature for those who may wish to pursue the subject more intensively.

Attendance at the sessions so far has been unusually high. We hope this keeps up. It is inspiring to the class-leaders and stimulating to club members to see you coming regularly week after week. And if you find yourself liking it at all, you're going to get so much more enjoyment out of coming regularly.

Hope to see you all Tuesday, January 8, at Webster School, 8:30 p.m.
