

THE HOME STRETCH

Dear Round Dancer:

Wednesday, February 1, there will be no session at Burkhardt Center. We will skip this week, and resume the following Wednesday, February 8.

Normally, we have a little party, with refreshments, at the end of a series. This series will end February 15, but since Ash Wednesday falls on this date, it has been decided to have our refreshments at the dance of February 8. So please plan to stay just a little later next week, so that we can have our usual quota of dancing, and our party too.

Our third and final series in this round dance course will start February 29. (We are skipping the 22nd because this is a legal holiday, Washington's birthday, and all community centers will be closed.)

We hope you are all planning to continue with us in this third series. Whether you plan to go on and join one of the round dance clubs or not--we believe you will find the third series worthwhile. Grace Wolff will conduct it, and she will give you more of the skills that we all need to become accomplished round dancers. Although the primary purpose of this round dancing--the same as everything else we do in the area of recreation--is to have fun, we all know from experience that the more skill we acquire, the more confidence we feel, and the more fun we will have.

Some of you have asked about square dancing, and so we are enclosing with this bulletin additional information on a new square dance class that will be started February 20. If you are interested we will have square dance registration cards at the round dance sessions of February 8 and 15.
